	GENERAL
1.	Poland continues to use coal as strategic export:
	Following a series of conversations with members of the Dutch, Danish, Belgian, Swedish and Finnish diplomatic missions in Warsaw, the US Embassy in Warsaw reports that Poland continues to use coal as its "strategic export." The Embassy adds that the Polish Government apparently watches carefully its imports of strategic goods from the West.  When these imports lag behind agreed delivery schedules, the Polish Government quickly cuts off its deliveries of coal to the country at fault.
	This policy was recently applied against Denmark until it was able to assure Poland that delivery of automotive spare parts under the 1950 Polish-Danish trade agreement would be forthcoming. Currently, Austria is faced with a cessation of coal deliveries unless it can deliver to Poland 30,000 dollars worth of ball bearings in November and 16,000 dollars worth in December.  Comment: Poland can be expected to continue this policy as long as a shortage of coal exists in Western Europe.

	announced the dismiss Secretary General of seven-man Party Politburo, and was given the post of Vice Premier in the government.

This party reorganization decentralized power within the party, although the party position of President Gottwald vis-a-vis Slansky was improved. Slansky, who was a good "Moscow" Communist, may have been removed either because he was reaching a position of too much personal power within the party, or because he was held responsible for the present economic crisis in Czechoslovakia. The official announcement accused him of subversive activities.
